

Build the talent your region needs, with us

We design and run programs with funders, employers and governments, so underserved young people gain the AI fluency, judgement and connections to do work that lasts.

THREE WAYS TO PARTNER

Funders and foundations

Fund a cohort, a new program, or the research behind one.

- A program shaped around your priorities and geography
- Clear outcome targets agreed up front
- Regular reporting, and stories you can share

Employers

Shape what learners practise around the roles you hire for.

- Input on curriculum and real project briefs
- Mentoring and guest sessions from your team
- Early access to graduates for hiring

Governments and agencies

Deliver digital-skills and employment goals with a partner who knows the context.

- Programs designed for local labour markets
- Delivery in conflict-affected and low-income settings
- Data to report against your own indicators

HOW WE WORK

1. Find the gap

Which roles are changing, who is locked out, and why.

2. Co-design

Curriculum, selection and success measures agreed before launch.

3. Deliver

Online cohorts with live sessions, mentors and real projects.

4. Measure and report

Outcomes tracked after graduation, shared openly.

IN PRACTICE · PROGRAM

Source Code Accelerator

Preparing developers for AI-era work: free 7-week online cohorts for software developers aged 18–35, teaching how AI tools work, how they fail, and the judgement and human skills that make developers indispensable.

IN PRACTICE · FELLOWSHIP

Resilient Futures Fellowship

A four-month leadership program combining AI ethics, digital entrepreneurship and systems thinking with mentorship and real-world projects. Previous cohorts have backed emerging female technologists in conflict-affected contexts.

Talk to our co-founders

Every partnership starts with Alexandra Clare (Co-founder & CEO) and Marcello Bonatto (Co-founder & COO). Tell us what you want to change and where, and we'll come back within a week with ideas.
